

Watching The Crops Grow By Michael Steven Scott

One day a man named Cat Springs, decided to move to Iowa and grow his personal marijuana. The plants had grew well all summer. Cat then went to the local Sheriff and told them someone was growing marijuana on his property. The Sheriff set up a surveillance team and watched the garden for several weeks. Well, in Iowa it gets cold quick in the fall, so the Sheriff told the surveillance team to go home. Then told Cat, they may have scared off the grower and if he saw anything to call them. After the Sheriff left, Cat went down to the plants and harvested them. "Sure glad the Sheriff guarded my garden from those darn potheads!" Cat said.